HAPPY NEW YEAR!

The year 2007 was one roller coaster ride! Everybody talks about how hard that year was – for some reason. Maybe, you have a different story. Anyway, this is the year that everything will change! How do we know that? This year you will be brighter, healthier, more focused. This is the year for the most beautiful weddings ever. Claim your status and run with it! Build your platform for success. This has nothing to do with the upcoming elections! Yes, you have a platform. Campaign for yourself. You deserve it. It's something about this year already. It feels different. A certain "newness" is in the air. Some emails come in about a big wedding versus a small wedding. Here's the tip: Big weddings are no different from small weddings. Both require the same amount of work. The only difference is the price tag. If planned to every detail, a big wedding can be just as intimate as a smaller wedding. Details make for a smooth walk down the aisle. A bride should not be on her cell phone the day of the wedding checking on transportation. Allow the experts to handle your wedding. Choose a qualified (certified) consultant that will listen to your needs. The consultant should offer you a contract which clearly states the services. Make sure that you receive a cancellation clause in writing. Secure a wedding consultant (coordinator) at least six months out from your wedding date. Interview about three different consultants with three different prices. Request to see pictures of their work. Discuss with your fiancée before making a final decision. Choose someone that meshes well with both of your personalities. Be prepared to pay a deposit and begin the work. Relax and allow the expert to make your day an enjoyable one for you and your guests.
